

Hi Ben and Adam, Adam and Ben!

Yup, this is the letter written for you guys, my two favourite roommates! No need to explain what this “sending petals” letter is, since I’ve been using both your printers to scan the letters to put letters online all term and Ben you even wrote a letter yourself!

So you know that I’m writing a letter to the two of you... because you’re great! I want to thank you two for a really fun term, for battles with Nerf gun ammo, for being great friends, for over twenty-some boxes of Kraft Dinner pasted on our wall, for being funny individuals, for doing homework until 4 in the morning – or groceries together, for always being able to talk to you guys, and the list could go on.

Thanks!

Our house over the past four months has been a Sitcom (as pointed out on various occasions). In between Ben insisting on sleeping on the living room couch for weeks, a decorated bike with a card in the spokes to make sound, a wall full of drawings made out of blue tape, our new sport christened “dorm ball”, the quest to get Adam to try to eat vegetables (or anything other than crackers, grilled cheese sandwiches, or the above mentioned, infamous Kraft Dinner), the second term of engineering at Waterloo flew by pretty fast. One day we’ll write the pilot for this sitcom, I swear. Throughout assignments, projects, reports, code-writing, and design activities, it is always nice to be able to talk and laugh with you guys.

Ben, living with you for another term was great. You’re a very thoughtful person and I really appreciate that. I also really enjoy that we can share groceries and stories, cook and laugh together, and have good conversations. Plus, one day we’ll just quit all this engineering business and have a farm. It should be great!

Adam, living with you for the first time this term was also pretty awesome! We spent a lot of time together in class and out of class and I really enjoyed it. You’re very quirky and funny and enjoyable to be around. We have good discussions, you’ve introduced me to TV, and it’s just fun to hang out with you. Before I live on a farm with Ben, we’ll start a company, or a nerdcore rap band!

So I’m very looking forward to living with you guys again next term, and have a good coop term to the both of you!

And by the way Adam, this is written in Times New Roman, your favourite (but super boring) font!
